IT'S OVER

Boston voters stream to the polls to put an end to a bitter, but closer than expected presidential campaign. 2

RACE FOR THE WHITE HOUSE

Mass. voters choose Clinton while Trump shocks in several key states

Despite the state win the national outcome is still too close to call.

METRO STAFF

It's over.

More than a year after Hillary Clinton announced in a YouTube video that "I'm running for president" and Donald Trump announced his run with a blistering speech targeting some Mexicans as rapists and murderer, the nation on Tuesday selected its next commander-in-chief after a bruising, anxiety-ridden campaign.

At press time, the race remained too close to call. Florida, Pennsylvania and other critical swing states were still toss-ups. Massachusetts was easily called for Clinton early.

Metro readers can find final results at our website: www.Metro.Us.

Throughout much of the campaign, Clinton's lead hovered between slim and sizable in most polls and she seemed destined to cruise to victory. Then 11 days before the election, FBI Director James Comey revealed the agency was revisiting their investigation into Clinton's handling of classified emails, after discovering a trove of emails in a computer used by disgraced former congressman Anthony Weiner, who was under a sexting investigation.

In the wake of that news, Clinton's poll numbers started to soften and only started to recover when Comey on Sunday declared there was no evidence of wrongdoing.

What was a clear on Election Day was the determination Americans showed to vote in this historic election, waiting in long lines and fortunately confronting none of the violence or chaos some feared during one of the ugliest presidential campaigns in recent memory.

Boston area resident Arlene Reed, 84, wouldn't say who she was voting for but said the voting process was "wonderful."

"I'm glad to see a wonderful turnout," she said. "It showed everybody is interested, and that's good. It's been controversial."

Boston voters expressed the deep divide of the country as they cast their ballots for two of the most unpopular presidential candidates in recent memory.

"I voted for Mr. Trump," said Anne Doyle, 78 of Brighton. "I'm anti-Hillary and I think it's time to get rid of Obamacare. The Clintons are bad news. I did enjoy the election but only up until the past few days. I'm glad it's over with."

When asked who she was voting for, Jill Dilibero, 29, said "Hillary Clinton, obviously. I think she's on the right side of history. The election has been so nasty in so many ways, there's no other way to vote."

Conor McCullough,

24, said he "waited about an hour [to vote in Brighton], they said there was just one person per precinct. I voted for Hillary—originally I supported Bernie. As the campaign went on, I got more familiar with Hillary and now I think she's the most qualified candidate of all time."

Throughout the country, passions ran high as the long, draining presidential campaign and election dragged on. In heavily Democratic Philadelphia, where Clinton the night before hosted a star-studded rally that attracted more than 40,000, some voters were tossing in for Trump, including JoAnne Roberts, 63.

"I could spit on her," Roberts said of Clinton. She brought up Benghazi and foreign policy as reasons for her stance.

Many voters said they just wanted the race to end.

"I'm getting tired of Trump running his mouth," said Robert Ryan, 69.

During his campaign, Trump promised to make Mexico pay for a wall to keep out illegal aliens, to establish tougher immigration rules that would largely keep out Muslims and had won the endorsements of white nationalists.

"The winner will be challenged to bring America together," said Mark Daniel, outside Trump Tower, where a handful of dump trucks were parked to keep protestors at bay. "Whether it's Clinton or Trump, I want to see that person bring 100,000 Muslims, African Americans, Hispanics, Jews, everybody, to central part to plant seeds of hope, and weed out hate."

Though she wouldn't say who she voted for in Boston, Janet Marroquin, 34, said she "came back to vote because the line was so long earlier. You can't give your opinion if you don't come and vote. I hope everybody comes to vote."

Meanwhile, a 50-year-old Jamaica Plain voter who wouldn't give her name said she didn't want Trump to be president but "either way, there's no win here."

Both candidates traveled a rocky road to their party's nomination.

Clinton battled Vermont Sen. Bernie Sanders, who gained widespread support among millennials and college students. Sanders attacked Clinton as being soft and Wall Street, while promoting a liberal agenda that included providing tuition-free college education, boosting the minimum wage and attacking wealth inequality.

The Clinton campaign accused Sanders of making promises he couldn't possibly keep. Campaign officials also suggested that Sanders' positions were too liberal for the tastes of most voters.

After losing to Clinton in the primaries, Sanders endorsed her during a joint rally on July 12 in New Hampshire.

Trump faced a roster of competitors for the GOP nomination. He was one of 17 major candidates in the race in late March of 2015. It was considered the largest field for any political party in American history.

In televised debates, Trump relentlessly attacked the other candidates and attracted criticism from his own party for peppering his responses personal insults.

By the following March, only three GOP candidates were left standing: Trump, Sen. Ted Cruz of Texas and Ohio Gov. John Kasich. Cruz went on to capture most delegates in primaries in western states and Wisconsin to keep his candidacy alive. However, Trump won by a landslide in the New York primary and five northeastern states.

On the evening of May 3, Republican National Committee Chairman Reince Priebus declared Trump the presumptive nominee. Kasich dropped out the following day.

Trump brags that Brady voted for him, but no word from the QB

Trump announced he had the support of the Patriots quarterback and Bill Belichick.

NIKKI M. MASCALI
@MetroNewYork
nikkimascoli@metro.us

During a rally in New Hampshire on Monday night, Donald Trump announced that he received the support of two beloved New Englanders: Patriots coach Bill Belichick and quarterback Tom Brady.

"Tom Brady, great guy, great guy. Great guy, great friend of mine — great, great champion. Unbelievable winner," Trump said in Manchester. "He called today and he said, 'Donald, I support you, you're my friend, and I voted for you.'"

Trump drew wild cheers at the mention of Brady's name, and more when he said he was handed a letter in his plane from Belichick, which read:

"Congratulations on a tremendous campaign. You have dealt with an unbelievable slanted and negative media, and have come out beautifully — beautifully. You've proved to be the ultimate competitor and fighter. Your leadership is amazing. I have always had tremendous respect for you, but the toughness and perseverance you have displayed over the past year is remarkable. Hopefully tomorrow's election results will give the opportunity to make America great again. Best wishes for great results tomorrow."

Many took to Twitter after news broke about the letter, with one person saying they smelled "an orange-maned rat" behind the letter. Another said the letter was "in Trump's own rambling speaking style."

CSN New England and WBZ TV's Steve Burton confirmed that Belichick did write the letter, while Dave Zirin of The Nation reported that he did not, however, anticipate it would be read out loud.

There also seemed to be a few holes in Trump's assertion of Brady's support.

Yahoo News correspondent Hunter Walker tweeted that records indicate that Brady's voter registration "is currently inactive and he's not enrolled in a party."

Brady's wife, Gisele Bündchen, was asked by a commenter on Instagram if she and Brady supported Trump. The supermodel replied "NO!" (her caps).

It was confirmed that Brady did vote on Monday by absentee ballot, but was keeping mum on who he voted for.

Crowds turn violent at Cambridge mall waiting for Celtics' Jaylon Brown

Cambridge police used pepper spray to disperse a mob of more than 1,000 people that turned violent Monday while waiting for an appearance by rapper Deshaun Watson and Celtics rookie Jaylon Brown.

People started breaking glass and throwing bricks at officers at around 6 p.m. and officers responded with pepper spray. The crowd became aggressive when a number of people surged forward to try to gain access to the ticketed event with Brown and Deshaun Watson, knocking over barriers and stomping over people waiting in line.

No police were injured. Some people were treated for exposure to pepper spray, police said.

Mall officials were not immediately available for comment.

Police arrested six juveniles on charges of trespassing, disorderly conduct and disturbing the peace. ERIN TIERNAN

SC church shooter's trial delayed over competency issue

U.S. District Judge Richard Gergel also postponed jury selection from this week until Nov. 21 to allow time for the competency issue to be settled.

A federal judge on Tuesday said he had ordered an evaluation into whether accused white supremacist Dylann Roof was competent to stand trial for the fatal shootings of nine people at a historic black church in Charleston, South Carolina, last year.

"The Court is mindful that this delay in jury selection may be disappointing to some, but it is the Court's duty to conduct a fair trial and follow procedures which protect the legal rights of the defendant," Gergel said in a one-page order.

Gergel said he would rule on the competency of the 22-year-old Roof to stand trial by Nov. 18, following a hearing on the matter.

Roof's lead defense attorney, David Bruck, declined to comment in an email to Reuters. Federal prosecutors and a lawyer for Roof's family could not immediately be reached.

The final stage of jury selection had been set to begin on Monday at the U.S. courthouse in Charleston. But Gergel unexpectedly halted proceedings to hold a closed-door hearing with Roof and his lawyers.

Roof, who is accused of holding white supremacist views, faces 33 federal counts of hate crimes, obstruction of religion and using a firearm in a violent crime after he opened fire during a Bible study session at Emanuel African Methodist Episcopal Church in June 2015.

Federal prosecutors are seeking the death penalty. Roof has offered to plead guilty if that potential punishment was dropped, court filings show.

He also faces the death sentence in a state murder trial scheduled for next year.

Prosecutors say Roof planned the attack for months, singling out victims who were black and elderly. At the federal trial, they plan to present racist manifestos they say he wrote seeking to incite a race war. REUTERS

Former US intelligence official sentenced to prison for child porn

A former U.S. intelligence official was sentenced on Tuesday to 20 years in prison for producing child pornography following his guilty plea to the charge in August, prosecutors said on Tuesday.

Army Lt. Col. Steven Frederiksen, 42, of Stafford, Virginia, was also sentenced in U.S. District Court to 20 years of supervised release for luring four girls ages 14 to 17 into producing pornography through social media and messaging applications on his government-issued computer, the U.S. Attorney's Office for the Eastern District of Virginia said in a statement.

Frederiksen, an employee of the Defense

Intelligence Agency, tried to do the same thing with two other underage girls. He also possessed more images of child pornography and swapped child pornography with people online, the statement said.

Frederiksen pleaded guilty in August to producing child pornography and attempted coercion and enticement of a minor. He is a graduate of the West Point U.S. Military Academy, holds a master's degree in nuclear physics and is the father of three children. REUTERS

India abolishes larger banknotes in fight against graft, 'black money'

An Indian man holds a 1000 rupee note. GETTY IMAGES

The surprise move was designed to bring billions of dollars worth of cash in unaccounted wealth into the mainstream economy, as well as hit the finances of militants who target India and are suspected of using fake 500 rupee notes to fund operations.

Indian Prime Minister Narendra Modi on Tuesday announced that 500 and 1,000 rupee banknotes would be withdrawn from circulation at midnight to crack down on rampant corruption and counterfeit currency.

"Black money and corruption are the biggest obstacles in eradicating poverty," Modi said in a hastily convened address to the nation after a cabinet meeting.

Nearly 40 percent of India's economy is driven by small- and medium-sized enterprises that largely run on cash transactions. Economists said the move could impact these businesses, and in turn have a knock-on effect on economic growth.

There was concern among members of the public about changing larger denomination banknotes for new ones once they expired.

Around a dozen people lined up to use an ICICI cash deposit machine in suburban Mumbai soon after the announcement, trying to deposit bundles of 500 and 1,000 rupee notes.

The machine stopped working after 10 minutes. Only two customers managed to deposit their money, and a security guard informed the rest that the cash dispenser has reached its limit and would not accept any more.

Delhi taxi driver Anu Choudhury said his boss called to say he should not accept 500 or 1,000 rupee notes from customers.

Modi's ruling Bharatiya Janata Party came into power in 2014 promising to bring black market money into the regular financial system, but critics said it had failed, with government data showing the cash economy outpacing the formal economy.

A report by Washington, D.C.-based think tank Global Financial Integrity estimated that India lost $344 billion in illicit fund outflows between 2002 and 2011.

The finance ministry said India would introduce new banknotes of 500 and 2,000 rupees from Nov. 10. The old notes can be deposited in banks and post offices from Nov. 10 to Dec. 30. All cash machines will be closed on Wednesday and Thursday.

The head of the Reserve Bank of India, Urjit Patel, said he saw no impact on liquidity in the wholesale market and that the bank had ramped up production of the new series of notes over the last few months.

Modi said militants operating against India were using fake versions of the 500 rupee note, worth about $7.50 at current exchange rates.

"Terrorism is a frightening thing ... But have you ever thought about how these terrorists get their money? Enemies from across the border have run their operations using fake currency notes. This has been going on for years," Modi said.

India accuses its neighbor Pakistan of harboring militants who have launched attacks on its troops, particularly in the disputed Himalayan region of Kashmir which both countries claim. Pakistan denies the accusations.

Orlando could make Pulse club a memorial to massacre victims

The city of Orlando, Florida, may buy the Pulse nightclub where 49 people were killed in June, and officials hope to turn it into a memorial to the victims of the deadliest mass shooting in modern U.S. history, the city's mayor said on Tuesday.

Members of Orlando's City Council are due to vote on Monday on whether to approve an agreement between the city and Pulse's owner to purchase the dance club for $2.25 million.

"This location is now a permanent part of Orlando's history. It's the site of the most tragic event that has ever occurred in the city," Orlando Mayor Buddy Dyer said in a statement.

"With the city owning the property, we can engage in a public process to determine the future of the Pulse property and building."

Dyer said.

Omar Mateen, a 29-year-old claiming allegiance to the Islamic State militant group, opened fire inside Pulse on June 12 before being killed by police after a three-hour standoff. Fifty-three people were also wounded.

If the council votes to approve the purchase, city officials will begin assessing their options before the sale closes on Dec. 30, according to Dyer's statement.

Dyer said in a separate video posted on the city's website on Tuesday that local officials do not know yet exactly what type of memorial will be created.

"We do know we want to maintain it as is for a period of time, 12 to 18 months, so that people from around the country and world who want to visit the site can do so," Dyer said.

BRIEF

U.S. justices could allow Miami to sue banks over lending bias

The Supreme Court on Tuesday indicated it could allow the city of Miami to pursue lawsuits accusing major banks of predatory mortgage lending to black and Hispanic home buyers resulting in loan defaults that drove down city tax revenues and property values.

The eight justices heard arguments in appeals filed by Bank of America Corp. and Wells Fargo & Co. challenging a lower court's decision to permit the lawsuits by the Florida city against the banks. The cases were filed under the Fair Housing Act, a federal law outlawing discrimination in housing.

In September 2015, the Atlanta-based 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals overturned a lower court's decision to dismiss such lawsuits by the city against Bank of America, Wells Fargo and Citigroup Inc. Citigroup decided not to appeal to the Supreme Court. If the court splits 4-4, the 11th Circuit ruling would stand and Miami would prevail, but no national precedent would be set.

Based on the questions asked by the justices, it appeared unlikely the banks would gain the five votes needed to win the case outright. But it was possible that a ruling for Miami could allow the lawsuits to move forward while narrowing the scope of the cases and potentially lowering the amount of damages the city could win.

Chief Justice John Roberts seemed most skeptical of the city's lawsuit, at one point questioning whether a loss of property taxes could count as a direct injury that could give rise to a lawsuit. Roberts said the city's alleged injuries are "derivative of the injury to the homeowners who had the subprime mortgages and who suffered the foreclosure and so on." REUTERS

Is Brangelina's custody battle over?

Ever since the couple formerly known as Brangelina filed for divorce in September, there hasn't been a mug big enough to hold all of the tea that has come forth surrounding the Hollywood power couple. With child-abuse allegations against Brad Pitt, mandatory drug tests and the ongoing custody-battle details, it's honestly been hard to keep up with all the information.

We've sorted through this mess and looked to the most reliable source, TMZ, of course, to get our facts straight. Some people seem to think Brad and Angelina have reached a custody settlement — but this isn't true. While Angelina wants full custody of the kids, Brad filed for joint physical and legal custody Friday. In the meantime, a temporary arrangement that grants Angelina primary custody and Brad monitored visitation has been extended while they figure it out.

Apparently there are some problems money can't fix. Not sure if that makes us feel better or worse.

Kylie Jenner is opening Kylie Cosmetics 'soon'

Kylie Jenner's makeup game is always on point, but getting her look has been almost impossible.

Her online-only Kylie Cosmetics brand has been a huge success since launching in 2015, especially her famous lip liner/lipstick duo Lip Kits that sell out immediately. One time they even broke the internet, and not in a good way, after her site accidentally leaked customers' information.

Kylie is trying to cut down on these technological hiccups by opening her first Kylie Cosmetics store. She was scouting locations this summer and seems to have settled on one, according to her latest Instagram snaps showing a team doing some serious planning in an unfinished space.

There are no details yet about where it will be or an opening date, but you'll want to start your Black Friday full-contact-shopping training early to have a chance at a real-life Lip Kit.

Taylor Swift throws Lorde a bday bash

Lorde has officially kissed her teens goodbye. The "Royals" singer turned 20 on Monday and shared an intimate message on her Facebook about what this important birthday means to her. "If I'm being real with myself, in some ways I stopped feeling like a teenager a while ago... Some time in the last year or so, part of me crossed over."

But her good friend Taylor Swift made sure she crossed over in style, throwing the native New Zealander an intimate party at ZZ's Clam Bar in New York City, according to TMZ. Lena Dunham, Karlie Kloss and Aziz Ansari were also in attendance for the festivities. Tay-Tay posted a cute birthday message to Lorde, real name Ella Marija Lani Yelich-O'Connor, before they both flooded Instagram with snaps of the festivities. We're not jealous or anything.

Showing what films rarely show

Andre Holland of "Moonlight" says we too rarely see black people thinking in movies.

MATT PRIGGE
@mattprigge
matt.prigge@metro.us

On Steven Soderbergh's show "The Knick," Andre Holland gave a star-making performance: He played Dr. Algernon Edwards, a brilliant black surgeon who fights racism in the early 1900s. Sure enough, he's equally excellent in a small but crucial role in "Moonlight." Unfolding over three time periods, Barry Jenkins' acclaimed drama follows Chiron, a black boy from a low-income Miami neighborhood who grows into a hard adult. Holland pops up in the last part, playing Kevin, Chiron's old friend, with whom he had an intimate experience as a teen. They reunite over a long, tense yet hopeful scene.

It's not common enough to see these exact two people on movie screens.

It's rare that you get to see black people onscreen thinking. [Laughs] Just thinking, having a psychological experience. Usually it's the friend of the guy or he tells you where the star went. "Hey, guys, Tom Cruise went that way!" [Laughs] But in this movie, the camera just sits with these guys, thinking their way through a situation, feeling their way through it. That humanizes them.

There's a lot of complexity to Kevin, especially considering how much he changes over the film. He's so complicated. I kept thinking, "What is he trying to do? What is it that he wants?" For an actor, that's the question you have to know. What I like about him is he understands so much; he's come to understand a lot. Particularly this idea of masculinity. He's performing what it is to be a man: sleeping with a lot of women, talking a lot of s—, being a tough guy. Somewhere between story two and story three, he's changed entirely. He's no longer doing that. He's become a father. He acknowledges that there's something unfinished between he and Chiron. And he has the courage to pick up the phone and make the call. Especially for a black man, where he grew up, to come to that understanding is pretty fascinating.

That seems rare for anyone.

In my own life, I don't have many examples of people who've been able to do that. You get an idea of who you are, especially if you don't have a father to show you what it is to be a man. You get that idea and you stick with it. It becomes about survival. That's what happened between these two kids. Chiron retreats inside himself. He wears his mask, he puts in his teeth, he bulked up his body — all these things to protect him. On the other side you have Kevin, who puts on this air of "I'm cool, everything is good, I don't have any problems." But they're both doing the same thing: trying to avoid dealing with the thing itself.

The American way

The Naked and Famous are making it personal.

RACHEL RACZKA
@rachelraczka
rachel.raczka@metro.us

Between The Naked and Famous's 2010 runaway hit "Passive Me, Aggressive You" and 2013's "In Rolling Waves," the New Zealand synthpop band found themselves permanently relocated to America, attempting to keep up with their success. Amid a breather, the now L.A.-based electronic group eventually hit a turning point, following the amicable breakup of guitarist/vocalist/producer Thom Powers and vocalist Alisa Xayalith, who had been dating the eight years prior. The result is the twinkling synth-heavy "Simple Forms," their intimately revealing third studio release that dropped in October from Somewhat Damaged. Powers calls from the road to discuss their California transition and how the band prepared to discuss the very personal topics on the record.

You've been in the states for a while now. Are you still identifying as being a New Zealand band?

We moved here in 2012, and being an American band is exciting for us, but it's funny because I like being an alien. Like a New Zealander in America. I like being removed culturally. It's like a bonus or a handicap.

Is there a big difference between being characterized as a New Zealand band versus one from the states?

We have this thing [in New Zealand] called tall poppy syndrome. Poppies grow in a uniform line — and if one of them rises up among the rest, you have to chop them down. It's a New Zealand/Australian thing, and I think the English have it a bit as well. Anyone who is successful gets torn down quickly. The belief in yourself as an artist isn't a trait, as a culture. We're self-deprecating and our culture supports that. So maybe being an American band is exciting for us.

You've been quiet on your personal lives before now, but given the experience's influence on the release, it puts you and Alisa's former romance in the clear for questioning in a way. Has that been difficult for you?

We sat down and had a good conversation before we did the album. We had been very private up until this point, and The Naked and Famous was almost aggressively against anything personal being on the table. This is different for us, and it's refreshing. I don't think people care that much when you're not being an idiot — like that version of a reality star, where people say humiliating things. People aren't as interested when you don't want to undermine a friendship and relationships. So it's not a problem when people ask us.

We don't speak about each other in a way that's other than admiration and stability. Clearly something this personal feels like a sacred topic, but here we are and we're OK. It's definitely difficult. But I hope people see it as something quite constructive and a sane message to send to a world that's so hostile and aggravated.

Caity Lotz returns with the second season of 'Legends of Tomorrow'

The actress' martial arts training has come in handy.

TANIA M. MORENO
@MetroPhilly
letters@metro.us

Caity Lotz, who plays Sara Lance, aka Black Canary, in DC's "Legends of Tomorrow," chatted about her physical preparation to develop the character and what surprises await us in this second season of the series, which premiered Oct. 13 and airs every Thursday at 8 p.m. on the CW.

Your character has many action scenes. How intense was training for the fights?
I had been training in Filipino martial arts since before the program; thanks to that, it is much easier for me when they teach me the choreography, because I say, "OK, I know how to do this." Together we can learn quickly, which is good because we do not have to do too many takes.

How will Sara's fighting style in Season 2 change?
For now, it will not change. One of the things I wanted to try this season was to give more personality to the fights, I wanted for Sara to get hurt, to not seem so invincible. I wanted to get hit and you get tired, I think that would be a new and fun way to give some humor to the fights too, but overall I like the way she fights, so I hope the style stays.

How will Sara react to the arrival of the Justice Society of America?
She will not be a part of it, she will be like, "Who are these people, this team of know-it-alls?" I think she will find them annoying, because compared to them, we are like a group of rejects; we are definitely not like them.

What is going through Sara's mind at the beginning of the second season?
The death duel continues in this new season; Sara has not yet overcome it.

I do not know how long it is going to last, but I really want it to be a driving force to continue throughout the season.

At the end of last season, Sara also became very close to Leonard Snart (Captain Cold, played by Wentworth Miller). Will she also feel that loss?
Yes, everyone she loves dies. We have not dealt with that yet. Sara and Snart were my favorite, and I was very sad that it had to end. I miss that relationship and feel that they were a very interesting couple.

Do you know anything about the possibility of Sara having a girlfriend in Season 2?
So far, Sara is being a bit of a Casanova. I think it's fair to say that she has a little romance in her life, but I do not know how deep it is.

How to assemble the perfect cheese platter this holiday season

"Great Food Truck Race" winners the "Cheese Twins" share their secrets to holiday entertaining.

KATE MOONEY
@yatinbrooklyn
kate.mooney@metro.us

Charlie and Michael Kalish, aka the Cheese Twins, are a cheese-and-wine power couple.

The 34-year-old gourmands grew up near Sonoma County, California, where they worked in vineyards and cheese shops, but pursued different paths to cheese connoisseurdom.

Since joining forces, the identical twins have gone on to become finalists on "Chopped" and even win Season 7 of "The Great Food Truck Race." Now, the California-based twosome travel around the country tasting and talking cheese and wine. Not a bad gig.

The Kalishes, brand ambassadors of Meiomni wine, stopped by our offices with vino and a bevy of artisanal cheeses to show us the secrets to holiday entertaining.

Presentation

For cheese laymen like you and me, "serving" a cheese plate at a gathering consists of unwrapping the cheeses and placing them on a cheese board with a knife, so that everyone can help themselves.

But doing it that way, Michael says, often leads to a sticky mess. "When you invite people over for cheese, you learn things about them," he jokes.

Instead, make your cheese party mobile by creating cheese "vehicles," as the Kalishes call them. For example, spread blue cheese on a fig or a cracker, which folks can "grab and go". It encourages mingling—and eliminates the mess.

Must have tool: the cheese harp

Despite its name, a cheese harp is not something you play to serenade your guests. It's a practical tool that saves you the mess of slicing through, say, a wedge of crumbly blue cheese that inevitably falls apart, or a creamy goat that will muck up your knife.

A cheese harp has a thin, stainless-steel wire allowing for a clean, precise slice-through.

And most important: "You don't lose any cheese on the knife," Michael says.

Typically, if you put out a cheese round with a knife, guests will scoop out the insides until there's nothing left but the rind. "It gets really ugly, fast," Charlie says. Instead, use the cheese harp to slice the round into "pizza slices" for your guests to pull away.

BRADY, BELICHICK SHOW LOYALTY TO TRUMP

BURKE

@burke_metro

Ever have an overbearing friend who invites you and your significant other out for drinks every other Friday night and you constantly have to come up with excuses for a decline?

I imagine that has been the tenor of the relationship between Donald Trump and Bill Belichick and Tom Brady since Trump decided to run for boss of the free world.

Trump has been a loud and obnoxious friend to the Patriots organization for years, as he sat next to owner Robert Kraft at Gillette Stadium in 2012, sat next to Brady at a Floyd Mayweather fight in 2005 and went out to dinner with Bill Belichick and his lady friend this past May.

Trump is not exactly "besties" with anyone in the Patriots' organization, but he is an acquaintance — he is a friend. And if you ever have an acquaintance — a friend — that you've known for years and he or she winds up running for president of the friggin' United States ... I'm sorry, you're probably voting for him or her even if you disagree with their politics.

If you disagree with that you're either A) a disloyal person; or B) self-righteous, and besides — c'mon, it'd be pretty cool to say you knew the president on a personal level ... yes, even if that friend/president says insane things on the daily.

I really think that's what this comes down to. Brady, Belichick and likely Kraft voted for Trump because they go back a few years with him. That's all.

This is even assuming that they actually did vote for Trump. Gisele Bündchen led us to believe that Brady DID NOT vote for Trump this week after she replied, "NO!" on Instagram when a fan asked, "Gisele, I heard you and Tom were backing Trump! Is that true?"

Belichick, who has leaned left in the past and graduated from liberal beacon Wesleyan, did not flat-out say he was voting for Trump in his letter to the candidate either.

Trump remained loyal to Brady during the height of Deflategate, tweeting out in May of 2015: "Tom Brady would have won if he was throwing a soccer ball. He is my friend and a total winner!"

In April of 2015, the Patriots visited the White House to celebrate their Super Bowl victory with President Obama. Obama dropped a Deflategate joke, that was met with a thumbs down from Belichick — who was forcing a respectful smile.

Tom Brady and Donald Trump sitting together at a Floyd Mayweather fight in 2005. GETTY IMAGES

"I usually tell a lot of jokes at these events," Obama said. "But with the Patriots in town I was worried that 11 out of 12 of them would fall flat."

Brady did not show up for the White House celebration, as he was likely still irked at White House press secretary Josh Earnest for making a joke about Brady's infamous Deflategate press conference.

"The one thing I can tell you is that for years it's been clear that there was no risk that I was going to take Tom Brady's job as quarterback of the New England Patriots," Earnest said. "But I can tell you that as of today it's pretty clear that there's no risk of him taking my job either."

Deflategate, as we all know, was a sensitive subject for the Pats — so it's easy to understand why they're not exactly in line with all things Democratic Party these days.

Interestingly enough, the majority of Belichick's letter to Trump was focused on the way the media screwed with Trump during the campaign. Belichick can surely relate, as he's had a distain for the sports media dating back to Tom Jackson's "they hate their coach" jab in 2003.

So, the reason why New England's two favorite sons supported (but maybe not even voted for) Trump seems to be entirely for personal reasons. They hold a grudge against the media, they hold a grudge against the Democratic party, and they support a friend who has been loyal to them in the past.

This one's really not that complicated.

NFL power rankings | by Luke Miller

No. 1

Patriots
(7-1)

No bye week will threaten the Patriots' hold on the top spot, but a visit from the Seahawks this Sunday night might. The two teams meet for the first time since the 2014 Super Bowl. At least the Pats won't have to consider the threat of Marshawn up the middle.

No. 4

Chiefs
(6-2)

No Alex Smith, no Jamaal Charles, no Spencer Ware, no Jeremy Maclin, no Travis Kelce, no problem. That's a starting offense, minus the line, and it wasn't on the field for Kansas City on Sunday. And they still won. This team knows how to do that, make no mistake.

No. 6

Falcons
(6-3)

With their win against Tampa Bay coming on a Thursday, the Falcons should be well-rested when they face the Eagles this week. They're catching their fellow Birds at the right time. The Eagles have won just one of their last five, and faced three straight opponents coming off byes.

No. 8

Texans
(5-3)

The Texans look for their first road win in about the best situation possible — in Jacksonville against the last place team in their division, who have just lost four straight. If Houston wants to put it all together and establish itself as a top 10 team and the leader in their division, this is a game it can't lose.

No. 10

Giants
(5-3)

The game against the Eagles was a reversal of Odell Beckham Jr.'s season thus far: The yards weren't aplenty, but the touchdowns piled up. That's a trade I'm sure the Giants would take. Going forward, they have to feel good they're the only team to beat the Cowboys this season.

No. 2

Cowboys
(7-1)

Jerry Jones has said Tony Romo could be ready to go in Pittsburgh this week. Dak Prescott's play has insured that if Romo is ready to play, he's really ready to play. The Cowboys have rushed him back far too often and too early in the past. He provides insurance in case Prescott starts playing like a rookie.

No. 3

Raiders
(7-2)

Yes, Oakland's losses are to the Chiefs and Falcons, and maybe this ranking is unfair. But the Raiders have been making statements since their loss to Kansas City. After 23 penalties almost cost them a game in which they thoroughly outclassed Tampa Bay, they committed less than Denver on Sunday.

No. 5

Seahawks
(5-2-1)

It's not just kickers Richard Sherman was taking out with zero qualms Monday, but hits on receivers are legal once the quarterback scrambles out of the pocket. It was good timing for Seattle's first win in three weeks, as they may meet their match when it comes to exploiting the rulebook in New England.

No. 7

Broncos
(6-3)

Yes, Denver's defense let Oakland set the tempo with the run game Sunday night, racking up over 200 yards on the ground. But it's a two way street, and Denver couldn't muster 40 rushing yards against the NFL's 21st-ranked run defense. The offense is a problem in the Mile High City.

No. 9

Vikings
(6-3)

Norv Turner exiting the building didn't solve any problems for the Vikings, who dropped their third straight. It's hard to fault a defense that only let Matthew Stafford get to 16. But that sure didn't look like the secondary we've come to expect on Golden Tate's catch-and-run game winner.

Best of the rest

- 11 — Lions (5-4)
- 12 — Chargers (4-5)
- 13 — Packers (4-4)
- 14 — Steelers (4-4)
- 15 — Colts (4-5)
- 16 — Dolphins (4-4)
- 17 — Bills (4-5)
- 18 — Cardinals (3-4-1)
- 19 — Redskins (4-3-1)
- 20 — Eagles (4-4)
- 21 — Saints (4-4)
- 22 — Bengals (3-4-1)
- 23 — Ravens (4-4)
- 24 — Panthers (3-5)
